March 2023 Fund Update

In March, the Fund fell 0.9% (after fees). This compares to a decrease of 0.2% for the S&P/ASX200 and a fall of 0.7% for the Small Ords.

Following on from the reporting season month of February, March was a relatively quiet month with little news from our companies.

Our best contributor for the month was REA Group (realestate.com.au ASX: REA) which rose by 12%. REA made no stock exchange announcement this month, but an improvement in property prices was widely reported in the media.

Australian house prices recorded their first rise in 11 months, with capital city values appreciating by 0.6% in March. The falls had bottomed out in February with a modest decline of only 0.1%. Sydney led the gains in March at 1.4%, followed by Melbourne at .6%.

Speculation by commentators of a pause in RBA interest rate rises towards the end of the month perhaps also helped. The RBA had increased interest rates 10 times in a row for a total rise of 3.5%, so a pause to give some time for previous increases to work their way through the economy, and to assess their full impact before adding further rises, was already overdue.

REA is one of the highest quality businesses listed on the ASX, operating an essential service for the residential property market within an effective duopoly and given its strong pricing power. Short term sentiment regarding the housing market shouldn't move the price of REA as much as it does, but therein lies the opportunity for us as investors. The fall in the stock price last year in a weak property market allowed us to enter the stock at reasonable price, which is now paying off.

The equal two biggest detractors this month were IDP Education and Healthia (ASX: IEL and HLA) which fell

5% and 11% respectively. Neither had any significant news. IEL remains well placed to benefit from the growth in demand for international student placement and English language testing. Healthia's underlying growth has normalised post Covid and they continue to make sensible bolt on acquisitions.

We continue to identify compelling investment opportunities. We have seen in the past that as our companies execute on their business opportunities, the market will eventually recognise this in their share prices. This is what has driven our longer term investment returns namely, our ability to continue to identify compelling opportunities.
